Computing: I always been interested in computers, when I was a kid, I used to spend time at my brother's computer, trying to learn something new about upcoming features. During high school, I studied the fundamentals of informatics and microsoft office, then I decided to study animation, movies and video editing, learning how to use Adobe Photoshop and Adobe Premiere.

I am currently spending most of my time improving my programming skills and always learning something new. Whenever any of my friends have issues with technology, they will contact me as I am always happy to give an answer or search for one.

Hobbies: I spent part of my free time travelling or finding informations about new places, watching and playing football, watching movies or series.

I had been working in different countries and different businesses, each of my previous roles taught me something new.

I developed and improved skills such as: working effectively as a team member or independently, accuracy and attention to detail, self-motivation and use of judgement and ability to solve problems efficiently. I believe that all of the above skills will be valid transferable skills in my future role.

I recently finished a 12 week software development bootcamp, I was able to learn multiple programming and database languages. The bootcamp gave me a solid base and some experience.

I am looking to join a company where I will be able to achieve company targets, applying my skills and continue to improve my knowledge.
